Headline:
Another sunny and warm day, but turning wintry Monday.

Today:
A frosty and foggy start for some, but quickly warming through the morning due to clear skies and plenty of sunshine. Temperatures highest in the east, but quite a bit cooler inland from Cardigan Bay. Maximum temperature 14 deg C (57 deg F).

Tonight:
Strong winds and risk of coastal gales developing. Temperatures drop sharply leading to a harsh frost. Rain followed by wintry showers push in from the north, mostly clearing by dawn. Minimum temperature -2 deg C (28 deg F).

Monday:
A mostly dry morning with snow showers arriving in the afternoon. A cold day with a biting northerly wind, despite the frequent sunny spells. Another widespread frost developing overnight. Maximum temperature 7 deg C (45 deg F).

Outlook for Tuesday to Thursday:
Unseasonably cold through this period, with widespread frosts. Unsettled with breezy wintry showers and sunny spells Tuesday. Conditions ease for most on Wednesday. Windy with outbreaks of rain Thursday.
